Newark Campus Development Fund

A Promise to Our Students. An Investment in Our Future.

We are thrilled to celebrate the extraordinary impact Newark Campus Development Fund donors are having on students across Licking County. In the pages that follow, you'll hear directly from some of the students whose futures are being shaped by your generosity.

Our young people are the future of our communities, and when we invest in their education, we are investing in the future of Licking County.

In an effort to continue supporting as many students as possible, Central Ohio Technical College (COTC) and the Newark Campus Development Fund (NCDF) launched the Licking County Promise, a new initiative created to help make college more accessible for eligible Licking County residents attending COTC.

The Licking County Promise was established to complement the Ohio State Regional Campus Commitment, with both programs expanding tuition-free opportunities for students from households earning $100,000 or less who meet all other eligibility requirements. Together, they are helping remove financial barriers and create clearer pathways to higher education for local students and families.

The Licking County Promise is possible because of the generosity of NCDF donors. Since 1983, community members, families, businesses, and foundations have invested in endowed scholarships through NCDF to support student success and strengthen our community.

Because of donor support, NCDF has helped create:

- Endowed scholarships that provide long-term student support
- Memorial scholarships honoring loved ones and creating lasting legacies
- Community and business partnerships that invest in local students
- Expanded access to affordable higher education in Licking County

The impact of this investment reaches far beyond tuition. It gives students the confidence to pursue their goals, families greater peace of mind, and our community a stronger, more educated workforce. Every scholarship represents an investment in a student's potential and in the future of Licking County.

Through the continued support of NCDF donors, more students will have the opportunity to pursue higher education close to home and build a stronger future for themselves and our community.

Thank you for believing in our students, supporting their dreams, and helping open doors that can shape their lives for years to come.

A Partnership Built on Purpose:

The Cost-Share Model at COTC and Ohio State Newark

CELEBRATION OF PARTNERSHIP 1971–2026

For 55 years, COTC and The Ohio State University at Newark have demonstrated what is possible when two institutions commit not only to a shared space, but to a shared vision. The cost-share partnership, established in 1971 when COTC joined Ohio State on the Newark campus, is widely regarded as a rare and innovative model in higher education, one that maximizes resources while expanding opportunity for students and strengthening the surrounding community.

Matthew J. Smith, Ph.D., Dean and Director of Ohio State Newark, and John M. Berry, Ph.D., President of COTC.

At the heart of this partnership is a thoughtfully designed cost-sharing structure. While each institution maintains its own leadership, academic programs, faculty, and student body, they collaborate extensively behind the scenes. Buildings, general-purpose classrooms, support staff, operating expenses, and capital investments are all shared. Costs are allocated using carefully developed formulas based on enrollment, space usage, and direct expenses, ensuring fairness and flexibility as needs evolve.

This approach allows both institutions to operate more efficiently while delivering a robust student experience. Approximately 80 staff members serve in joint departments, including facilities, business and finance, advancement, student life, marketing and public relations, and public safety.

The result is a seamless, high-quality experience that rivals that of much larger institutions, all while saving more than $2 million annually.

Students are among the greatest beneficiaries of this collaboration. Together, COTC and Ohio State Newark offer a full spectrum of educational pathways, from certificates and technical degrees to bachelor's programs and beyond. Shared student services, including counseling, career development, and campus life opportunities, ensure that all students have access to the resources they need to succeed.

"This array of services benefits our students and their abilities, and they wouldn't be able to have it if each of us were one individual institution," said John M. Berry, Ph.D., president of COTC. "We have a fully staffed group of individuals who share a passion for both institutions and the students we serve."

Equally important to the success of this partnership is the role of NCDF.

Since its founding, NCDF has helped fuel the growth and sustainability of the campus by providing critical support for scholarships and infrastructure. Through NCDF, donors have the flexibility to direct their support to COTC, Ohio State Newark, or a shared pool of philanthropic resources that benefits both institutions. This enables the campus to invest in modern facilities, enhance learning environments, and expand access to education for all local students.

"NCDF plays a vital role in sustaining and strengthening the unique partnership between Ohio State Newark and COTC," said Matthew J. Smith, Ph.D., dean and director of Ohio State Newark. "By giving donors the opportunity to tailor their giving, whether through a gift that benefits the entire campus or a contribution to a specific institution, NCDF has helped us develop state-of-the-art facilities and provide meaningful support for our students, advancements that would be extraordinarily difficult to achieve if each institution operated independently."

As COTC and Ohio State Newark celebrate 55 years of partnership, their cost-share model continues to stand as a powerful example of what can be achieved through collaboration. By working together, they are not only stewarding resources wisely; they are transforming lives and creating lasting impact for generations to come.

CENTRAL OHIO TECHNICAL COLLEGE

Meaningful connections inspired a medical career for Traci Bioh.

While in high school, Traci Bioh discovered she had a tumor in her collarbone and was admitted to Nationwide Children's Hospital. During her time there, she formed meaningful connections with her care team, an experience that inspired her to pursue a career supporting patients the way she was supported during her stay. Traci later completed a short internship at the hospital and will return for her clinicals. She has a love for kids and pre-teens and feels she can connect with them on a deeper level.

After completing her associate's degree, Traci plans to return to school to earn her bachelor's degree and become a flight respiratory therapist with Children's Hospital. Her end goal is to earn her master's degree from Ohio State and become an Advanced Practice Respiratory Therapist.

Traci's leadership and service were recognized with the 2025 J. Gilbert Reese Next Generation Community Leadership Award, presented to just two students in 2025.

Traci has loved her time on the Newark campus. She shared that one of the biggest benefits is the strong sense of community and support for students. She especially appreciates how much the staff genuinely care and consistently show up for students. "The people here are sincere and supportive. They create an environment where it's clear they truly want to help others rather than simply going through the motions," shared Traci.

While on campus, Traci participated in several activities and clubs. One in particular was the Italian Immersion Program, where she traveled to Reggello and Florence, an experience she described as eye-opening. Traci is also a member of Phi Theta Kappa, an international honor society that provides opportunities for leadership, fellowship, and service.

Traci received The Richard T. and Dorothy J. Oberfield Scholarship. Reflecting on what receiving this scholarship meant to her, she shared that education is very important to her family. While both of her parents work hard, the cost of college would have placed a financial strain on them. This scholarship has allowed her to pursue her goals with greater confidence.

Traci expressed deep gratitude for the generosity of donors and shared how meaningful it was to connect with them at the annual Scholarship Dinner. Their support has helped make her education possible and inspired her to give back to her community.

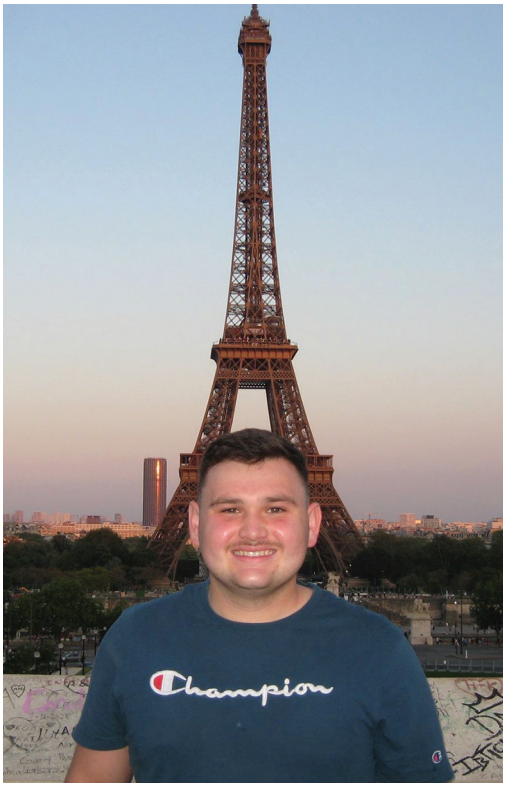

If there is one thing Joshua McNichols has always known, it's that one day he would be a Buckeye.

With his parents having met and graduated from The Ohio State University at Newark and several of his siblings also attending the regional campus, it was no surprise that after graduating from Lakewood High School in 2023, Joshua followed in those same footsteps.

One of the most impactful parts of Joshua's college experience has been the Second-Year Transformational Experience Program (STEP). Through the encouragement and mentorship of Dr. Lucille Toth, Madeline Sharp, and Dr. Virginia Cope, Joshua participated in a study abroad trip to Paris, France. The experience made such an impact on him that he returned home motivated to spread awareness about STEP and now serves as the student assistant for outreach and engagement for the study abroad program.

Joshua is a proud recipient of The Park National Bank and Associates Scholarship Honoring William T. and Jane Cook McConnell. He shared that receiving this scholarship has brought many meaningful opportunities into his life, including the honor of meeting and interacting with Matthew J. Smith, Ph.D., dean and director of Ohio State Newark. Joshua was invited by Dean Smith to speak at the Rotary Club of Newark, an experience he says has continued to open doors for him.

When asked what he would say to the donors who provided the scholarship funds, Joshua responded, "Thank you from the bottom of my heart. You are truly making a difference in students' lives."

Beyond the classroom: Creating transformational experiences

At Ohio State Newark and COTC, students have the opportunity to gain valuable experiences that extend far beyond the classroom through programs like the Second-Year Transformational Experience Program (STEP) and the Italian Immersion Program. These opportunities help students explore their interests, build confidence, develop cultural awareness, and form meaningful connections with faculty mentors and fellow students.

"If it wasn't for STEP, I wouldn't have participated in a study abroad program." – Zaak

"I love that COTC provides this opportunity. It was an eye-opening experience." – Traci

STEP Student Impact

- Expanded opportunities: STEP encourages second-year students to pursue transformational experiences, including research, leadership development, internships, and study abroad programs.
- Faculty mentorship: Students work closely with mentors who provide guidance, encouragement, and support throughout their journey.
- Personal growth: Participants report increased confidence, stronger communication skills, and a greater willingness to step outside their comfort zones.
- Peer connections: Cohort experiences create lasting friendships and expose students to diverse perspectives.
- Academic success: Enrichment opportunities like STEP have been shown to support student retention, GPA improvement, and graduation rates.

Global Learning Through Italian Immersion

Since 2009, the Italian Immersion Program has provided COTC students with a unique opportunity to experience another culture firsthand. Thanks to the extreme generosity of the Gilbert Reese Family Foundation, students experience an all-expenses-paid educational journey in Italy, where they stay with host families and explore the rich history, art, language, architecture, and traditions of the Tuscany region.

"In addition to serving as professional development, it provided a surge in self-esteem." – Illyas

Italian Immersion Program highlights:

- Stay with local host families
- Explore Florence, Reggello, and the Tuscany region
- Experience Italian culture, language, history, and cuisine
- Develop global awareness and cultural competency
- Gain life-changing experiences that broaden perspectives

By investing in our students today, you pave the way for the leaders of tomorrow. Join us in expanding these transformative programs and help every student reach their full potential beyond the classroom.

After graduating from Granville High School in 2023, Sarah Ghiassi found her second home at Ohio State Newark.

Throughout her time at Ohio State Newark, Sarah has dedicated herself to serving both the campus and the local community.

On campus, she has embraced numerous leadership opportunities. Drawing on her passion for crafting, Sarah founded the Crochet Club during her freshman year. The club promotes mental wellness among its members while also giving back to the community through handmade donations. In addition, she has been involved with Active Minds, a mental health organization, and the Campus Activity Board. Sarah has also worked during the summer to assist with orientation and currently works in the Office of Retention and Student Success Initiatives. Through both roles, she has enjoyed supporting fellow students and contributing to campus life.

Sarah's leadership and service were recognized with the 2025 J. Gilbert Reese Next Generation Community Leadership Award, presented to just two students in 2025.

Beyond campus, Sarah has devoted many hours to serving the Newark community. She has volunteered with the Market Street Pantry, Newark Homeless Outreach, and The Turban Project, where she sews headwear for warriors with medical-related hair loss. Sarah also serves as Ohio State Newark's representative on the Collegiate Mental Health Advisory Board of Ohio, advocating for student mental health initiatives across the state.

Reflecting on her experience, Sarah shared, "All my professors here at the Newark campus are deeply passionate about their jobs and are committed to student success. It is evident that my professors care about my well-being, both inside and outside the classroom, and work tirelessly to ensure that my education is as accessible and engaging as possible. I feel like the Newark campus has become my second home, and my professors have fostered that welcoming environment."

Sarah also credits the smaller class sizes and abundance of campus resources with helping shape her college experience. The close-knit environment has allowed her to build meaningful relationships with faculty, staff, and fellow students while growing both personally and professionally.

Sarah is incredibly thankful for The Melissa Warner Bow Family Scholarship and the opportunities it has provided throughout her college journey. Looking ahead, Sarah hopes to use her time, energy, and talents to serve her community and make a positive impact on the lives of those around her.

Vanessa Bennett has always been driven by a love for learning and a desire to give back.

Those values have shaped not only her education, but also the way she approaches her community, relationships, and future goals.

After graduating from Newark High School in 2024, Vanessa was excited to continue her education at Ohio State Newark because it allowed her to stay close to her support system and remain connected to the community she has always loved while beginning the next chapter of her life.

Service and involvement have always been important parts of Vanessa's life. That commitment to involvement continued as she arrived on campus. Vanessa has helped with orientation, worked with the dean of academic affairs, and will soon begin working at the Neuroscience Research Institute at The Ohio State University in Columbus. She is also conducting a specialty research project under Dr. Tiyi Morris focused on the medical abuse women of color have experienced throughout history. Vanessa will present her research both at a conference in Virginia and at the Newark Research Forum, opportunities she is excited to be part of as she continues growing academically.

During her sophomore year of high school, Vanessa's passion for psychology began when she realized how fascinated she was by the connection between the brain, behavior, and decision-making. Combined with her desire to help others, psychology quickly became the path she knew she wanted to pursue. Today, she is working toward a Bachelor of Science in Psychology with minors in Neuroscience and Women's, Gender and Sexuality Studies. Vanessa hopes to continue her education by earning both her master's degree and Ph.D. and eventually working in a hospital setting as a neuropsychologist.

Scholarship support has played a tremendous role in helping Vanessa pursue her goals. Thanks to the generosity of donors through the Newark Campus Development Fund and receiving The Ohio State Newark Next Generation Challenge Scholarship, she has been able to focus more fully on her classes, research, and volunteer work rather than the financial stress that often comes with college. Reflecting on the support she has received, Vanessa shared, "Thank you for giving me the opportunity to continue my education. I feel blessed to be in such a thoughtful community."

The people who leave the deepest marks on our lives often continue to influence us long after they are gone.

For nearly a decade, Lori Brown had envisioned creating scholarships to honor the people who shaped her life. After a conversation with her financial advisor, she found a path to turn that long-held dream into reality, establishing two scholarship funds with the Newark Campus Development Fund to honor the individuals who shaped her life most: her parents, Edwin and Margaret Sabrack, and her husband, Alan Brown.

While each scholarship supports a different field of study, both reflect the values Lori admired most in her loved ones. The Edwin and Margaret Sabrack Scholarship will support students pursuing nursing degrees, with preference given to nursing students and secondary consideration for students from the allied health programs. The scholarship is a tribute to Lori's mother, Margaret, and her lifelong commitment to caring for others as a nurse and to the kindness and compassion she showed throughout her life.

"People would often tell stories about how my mother touched their lives," Lori shared. "She was kind, thoughtful, and gentle, and helping future nurses felt like the best way to honor her memory."

Lori's father, Edwin, shared Margaret's devotion to family and community. The youngest of six children, he loved sports, fishing on Lake Erie, golfing, and spending time with his family. Together, Edwin and Margaret built a life centered on hard work, service, and caring for others, values that will continue through the students who receive their scholarship.

The Alan Brown Scholarship honors Lori's late husband of 36 years. After serving in the United States Air Force, Al built a successful career as a computer programmer at AT&T Bell Labs and was known for his determination, generosity, and commitment to helping others. A Red Cross volunteer, mentor at Madison Elementary School, and enthusiast of nature, Al believed in creating opportunities through hard work and self-motivation.

The scholarship established in his honor will support students pursuing business or entrepreneurship, with secondary consideration for students studying biology, evolution, ecology and organismal biology. This scholarship reflects Al's entrepreneurial and nature loving spirit and the self-driven approach that helped him build a successful career.

These two scholarships are creating more than financial assistance for students; they are creating a lasting tribute to the people Lori loved most, ensuring that their values of compassion, service, determination, and generosity will continue to impact future generations.

"A lasting legacy often begins as a dream and with thoughtful planning, that dream can become an opportunity for generations to come."

Nate Adams, MBA, Financial Advisor at Edward Jones

Autumn Gillespie discovered that sometimes the path to the right career is not a straight line.

For many people, discovering what they are truly passionate about takes time, life experience, and the willingness to try something new. That was the case for recent COTC graduate Autumn Gillespie.

After graduating high school in 2011 and taking some time to work and save money, Autumn attended college in North Carolina, where she earned her associate's degree in Office Administration. After returning home to Ohio and feeling unsure about her next step, a friend working as a nurse at Licking Memorial Hospital (LMH) encouraged her to apply for a Patient Care Assistant position.

The thought of working in a hospital had always intrigued Autumn, but she had never imagined that healthcare would eventually become her career path. After starting her role at LMH, she quickly realized it was a great fit and discovered how much she enjoyed helping people, which inspired her to begin exploring nursing school.

Autumn found that the nursing program at COTC would be a great fit for her. She was quickly accepted and began classes while continuing to work the night shift at LMH. Two years later, she graduated with her associate's degree as a Registered Nurse. The proximity, atmosphere, and down-to-earth feel of the campus made COTC a great place to complete her first two years while working full-time throughout the program.

Her time at COTC didn't stop there. In the autumn semester of 2024, COTC launched its Registered Nurse to Bachelor of Applied Science in Nursing program, and Autumn was part of the first class to take full advantage of it.

"I think it's great that COTC started their bachelor's program for nursing. I know a lot of people that have come through COTC, and this is a big thing for them. I think it's really great that nursing students can continue their education here," Autumn shared.

Although Autumn has worked full-time throughout this entire journey, she says she would not be where she is today without the scholarships she received. Receiving The Licking Memorial Health Systems Scholarship made a world of difference for her.

Autumn is excited to be a recent graduate of the BSN program and commented, "I loved seeing all the people in my graduating class in different stages of life. There are so many opportunities at COTC. They really make it accessible."

The close-knit atmosphere and strong sense of connection on campus has helped Ava Woodburn succeed.

Ava Woodburn, a 2025 graduate of Newark High School, is the proud recipient of The J. Gilbert and Louella H. Reese Scholarship. Living close to campus with her mom and stepfather, Ava knew attending college locally would allow her to stay connected to the support system that means so much to her.

In sixth grade, Ava joined the running club and quickly fell in love with it. As she continued competing through high school, she experienced injuries that required X-rays and MRIs on her ankles and knees. Through those medical visits, Ava became familiar with Radiologic Technology and began considering it as a future career path.

Her interest continued to grow while attending a camp at Licking Memorial Hospital, where she explored different hospital departments and learned what it would be like to work in each area. The experience confirmed her desire to become a Radiologic Technologist, allowing her to combine her interest in healthcare with her desire to help patients feel comfortable and supported.

Since beginning classes on the Newark campus, Ava has become actively involved in the Global Citizens Learning Community (GCLC), a program designed to help first-year students transition from high school to college while encouraging global awareness and community engagement. As an avid animal lover, she supports the Humane Society of Licking County through her involvement with the program. Ava says being part of the GCLC has broadened her perspective and deepened her understanding of the challenges some students in her own community face.

Ava describes the Newark campus as "one of the best experiences" of her life. She values the close-knit atmosphere and the strong sense of connection among students, faculty, and staff. She especially appreciates the encouragement she has received from the counseling center, academic success coaches, and peer coaches who regularly check in with her. From preparing for exams and presentations to offering study tips and emotional support, Ava says the campus community has helped her succeed both academically and personally.

Ava hopes to work at Licking Memorial Hospital after graduation. One of the most important things she learned during her first semester was the value of advocating for herself, something she says made her second semester much more successful. With her drive, resilience, and caring nature, Ava is poised to make a lasting impact in the healthcare field, and we wish her continued success as she pursues her goals.

This investment in our students and community would not happen without our generous donors!

We gratefully accept a broad range of gifts to establish or add to a fund.
Donors may consider a variety of assets to contribute, such as:

- Gifts of cash
- Matching Funds – Employer matching gifts can double the impact of a gift
- Publicly Traded Securities
- Life Insurance Policies
- Individual Retirement Accounts
- Bequests
- Charitable Gift Annuities
- Charitable Remainder Trusts
- Charitable Lead Trusts
- Real Estate

Endowed funds can be established by individuals, families, businesses, foundations, non-profit organizations, and service groups. A total gift of $25,000 is required to establish an endowed fund. This minimum level can be contributed over five years. A unique feature of establishing an endowed fund at NCDF is that we do not assess any administrative fees—the only fees applied to a fund are investment fees.

You can honor someone special by giving a memorial or tribute gift in their name—a meaningful way to honor them while supporting our mission. Your thoughtful gesture will be a lasting tribute to your loved one and make a difference in the lives of those attending the Newark campus.
